Hello, my name is Keiko and I'm fifteen years old. Today I'm going to talk about my mother's father.

He is 75 years old. He lives with my family in Osaka. He says, "I am very glad to live with you. That's OK. I want nothing more." He watches TV, talks with us, and has dinner with my family every day. I think he is having a good life. I want to live with my family like him when I become old.

He is well now, but he became sick two years ago and moved from Okayama to Osaka to live with us. My mother took care of him. It was hard, and I helped him, too.

He looks happy when he talks with us. But sometimes he doesn't look happy. I can understand why. In Okayama he had many friends, grew a lot of fruits, and enjoyed it very much. But now in Osaka he has no friends and nothing to do in my house. He only walks near my house. I know he wants to do something.

He often says that he wants to go back to Okayama, but I want to live with him because he is very old. What should he do? What should my family do for him?
